The sessions were interactive with active participation of students in discussions and through Q and A.

In one of the activities, the students were given a list of 12 questions which they had to rate as True, false or Neutral. These questions dealt with an individual's perceptions and thoughts towards their body image. The speaker spoke on body shaming and advised the students to ignore critical comments from society and remain positive. She further advised the students to take small doses of positive self – talk daily of their body image.

During the session, students shared their perspective on 'happiness', positive and negative emotions, etc. The speaker covered important aspects such as subjective well being and life purpose. In the end, a very beautiful session of meditation was conducted with the sweet and soothing sound of the Tibetan bell ringing in the background.

Participants:

The total registrations for the workshop was 160. Students who were present for all the sessions were given certificates on completion of the workshop. A total of 62 students received the certificates. The participants consisted of 15 students from BMS, 8 students from BSc IT, 6 students from BAF, 8 students from B.Com, 18 students from BBI and 7 students from BMM.

Feedback:

Feedback form was circulated after each session. The overall response from students for questions of 'Relevance of the session' and 'Speakers ability to connect with audience' was overwhelmingly positive. For the aforementioned questions, more than 80% of the students rated 4 and 5, in the 5 point likert scale. Students (More than 95%) also expressed their readiness to attend similar sessions in the future.

The active participation and positive feedback from students encourages us to organise similar sessions on the theme of mental health for youth at least once a year. Students have to cope with issues such as body image, toxic relationships, resilience, happiness and procrastination, but they may not also have an expert guide to help them. These sessions with experts from the field of psychology will fill this gap between the medical practitioner and the parent.
