Introduction

One person may send goods to another person (agent) for selling them on his behalf and risk. The person sending the goods is the owner of goods and the person to whom these goods are sent is his agent. Such goods are called Goods sent on Consignment.

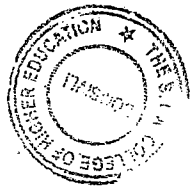

The flowchart shows 'Goods sent on Consignment' in a central oval, with arrows pointing to 'Consignment Account', 'Consignment Inventory', 'Consignment Sales', and 'Consignment Expenses'.

TYPES OF COMMISSION

The diagram shows three boxes: 'SIMPLE COMMISSION', 'DEL-CREDERE COMMISSION', and 'OVER RIDING COMMISSION', all pointing to a central oval labeled 'COMMISSION'.

Normal Loss

When goods are sent by the consignor to the consignee and loss in transit arises due to natural causes, such loss is known as normal loss. Such losses may arise due to weather effect due to any other natural cause.

Target Predicts A Teen's Pregnancy

Forbes

Target predicts a teen's pregnancy based on their purchase history. The article discusses how Target uses data science to analyze customer behavior and predict future purchases. It mentions that Target has a high accuracy rate in predicting when a customer will have a baby, often before the customer even realizes it. The article also notes that Target has used this data to create targeted marketing campaigns for pregnant women, such as offering discounts on baby products.
